History: LEARNING JOURNEY

Planned programme of revision

Exams start

Planned revision

Russia 1945 – 1953:
The emergence of the USSR as a super-power The breakdown in international relations and the start of the Cold War

The chronological approach to delivery supports basic understanding and enables thematic revision as the course progresses.

The last years

The NEA is delivered by the teacher of the Russia component as a more natural break exists in the content of this unit and this unit is also seen to require marginally less time in delivery than the British history unit – thus reducing time pressures on the Tudor side of the course.

The choice of topic area for NEA builds on GCSE and KS3 content so that students have some prior knowledge before undertaking their independent research.

Year 12 builds on learning undertaken in Key Stage 4 by developing students ability to analyse sources, interpretations and produce extended pieces of writing. Although there is an exam board change from Edexcel at GCSE to AQA at A level, there is continuity in the style of questions which supports the transition from GCSE to A level.
